Pack your bags and go in style with the Girlfriends L.A. Getaway.

Enter for your chance to win a trip to glamorous Los Angeles, California. Plus sensational sights, shopping and spa treatment for you and three of your best girls!

Equipment & promotional offers at these locations may vary.

Open only to legal female residents of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Virginia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Ohio who are 18 years of age or older. Void where prohibited. Full rules and details at www.alltel.com/girlfriends.

9/20/06   2:30:19 PM

Alltel-1.
Incumbent William Jefferson Faces Formidable Challengers in Re-election Bid

Interviews by Edwin Buggage

Congressman William Jefferson faces his toughest challenge yet as a slew of candidates vie for the right to represent Louisiana Congressional District 2—a seat that’s presently held by the incumbent William Jefferson. In a Data News Weekly exclusive we have interviewed all the major candidates, so that you the voters can get a clearer picture of each of the candidates who were forthright and candid with their thoughts as they fight for the right to represent the citizens of Louisiana Congressional District 2.

EB: What is it that separates you from your opponents?
WJ: Experience, the capacity to get the job done and an established record of getting the job done.

EB: What kind of things are you working on presently in Congress for the people of District 2?
WJ: Well, we’re working on getting more resources from the federal government in addition to what we’ve gotten, which is a considerable amount with room for improvement. But the other things that we’re working on...

Karen Carter

EB: Tell me a little bit about your campaign, and why you now have decided to make a run for the U.S. Congress?
KC: I thought there was a need for leadership at this critical time after Katrina; we have been crippled and we need to stand up ourselves. We need effective leadership and there was a void there. I thought I had a record of solid leadership when there was a time of need and I would lend my services. I felt we needed to restore credibility and respect to public service. My ethics...

Troy Carter

EB: What is it that prompted you to make a run for the U.S. Congress?
TC: You know there is a huge need now in this community for strong, effective concentrated leadership that has the integrity and credibility to go to Washington D.C. and I’ve served for sixteen years in public office without a single controversy. I’ve served in the state legislature, and on the New Orleans City Council. I’m a successful businessman, husband and father; I think I bring a very unique dynamic to...

Derrick Shepherd

EB: What made you decide to make a run for the U.S. Congress?
DS: Because the community needs the leadership Orleans and Jefferson Parish has not been served on the federal level, resources have been lacking and we need someone that will be more hands on in getting what the district needs.

EB: What is it about your campaign that separates you from the other candidates?
RB: I believe I should be elected because I’m different from the other candidates. I am the only one with an extensive platform that touches on every issue that affects the people of the Second Congressional District. I have a very people minded platform. I’m the only candidate who is not affiliated with any political organization or politics of the past and I think we need a change right...

Continued page 4.

Continued page 5.

Continued page 6.

Continued page 6.

Continued page 7.

Continued page 8.

Continued next page.

Continued next page.

Continued next page.
William Jefferson, Continued from page 3

beyond just getting additional resources for homeownership and affordable housing is a bill that would allow citizens and business to sue the Army Corps of Engineers. They have had immunity for eighty-four years and it’s never admitted before that its negligence caused a major disaster that drowned a major city and then it walks away from it. We don’t think that’s right, so I submitted a bill to change that and remove the immunity in cases of major disaster, like ours, that was caused by the Corps negligence. We have gotten the support of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Chair, Mr. Don Young, of Alaska, so we may have hearings perhaps in January. The next thing is our insurance laws which presently are completely in the hands of insurance companies with the ability to collude and unite to make decisions about whether its ability to come back home. Without flexibility from them and make decisions up to their responsibilities. We also want to broaden support for disasters and not just make it support in the case of flood insurance but also to remove any distinction between flood and anything else. It’s just going to be disaster insurance. So whatever type of disaster occurs, whether it’s a tornado in the mid-west or an earthquake in the west or a hurricane our way, it’s covered completely without the insurance company making a distinction between what events actually caused the damage. Those are the immediate things on the horizon that I am working on.

EB: In your opinion, what’s the biggest problem facing District 2 in this recovery?

WJ: Housing is a major issue; affordable housing, that’s for homeowners as well, because connected with that are the rapidly growing insurance rates and price gouging of landlords toward tenants is a horrible problem. The repopulation of our low income housing stock here is key, because so many of our people were not only renters but low income residents. For them, we also have to find a way to get them back home. Without housing, we can’t put people back to work, or to school, we can’t do any of that. But other than that, the healthcare system that’s still down and, of course, people don’t want to come back to a town that doesn’t have hospitals, doctors and clinics. Of course, there is an infrastructure; Sewerage and Water Board power infrastructure and all those things aren’t fully restored across town. So our biggest challenge is repopulating the city. We can’t do it without housing, without our healthcare system, and without our schools in place.

EB: The issue of race has made it to the forefront as of late and has played a part in the outcome of several recent elections and has been talked about in terms of the recovery as well. How much do you think race is an issue in this election although all the major candidates are African-American?

WJ: Well we know the folks who were most disproportionately affected by the storm were poor and African-American. And we know a lot of people wanted to say look the place didn’t flood on the high ground, that little sliver of high property was mostly white and well off and that we should build along that edge but not in any other areas. If you don’t build in those other areas people don’t come home. New Orleans East, Broadmoor, Pontchartrain Park, the upper and lower ninth ward which are almost exclusively African-American. So you have to read between the lines when people say they want to make those areas green space out of concern about risk is not really telling us the whole truth because we all know that the risk would not had been there if the levees would have held. With new levees and coastal barriers, we could live anywhere we want to in our city and build it all back, but there are forces out there that want New Orleans to stay small and majority white. That’s a real challenge for us to see through and to make sure we fight to get all our people back home not only to share in the recovery, but at the end of day, be the beneficiaries of the recovery with better schools, housing and health facilities. We don’t just want to bring people back to the same old place. We want to make it better than before with more opportunities.

EB: Forgive me, but some of your critics are saying because of some of the things you’re facing would impede your ability to be an effective Congressman, what do you say to them?

WJ: I say look at the results. These are things my opponents have to say because they can’t criticize my performance. When they look at having gotten the 11 billion dollars for housing for our people to return home, 6 billion dollars to fix our levees, 8 billion dollars in Go Zone legislation, 70 million dollars for affordable housing, and monies for school reestablishment, it’s pretty hard for them to criticize that record. That’s just part of it, and so they have to talk about distractions, but if I was so distracted, how could I be so productive.

EB: I would like to follow up on the healthcare system. When I’ve spoken with talked about bringing credibility and integrity back to government as to suggest that it’s something that’s lacking right now. What do you say to that?

WJ: All I can say to that is that I haven’t been charged with a crime. I maintain that I am innocent of any crime for which I could be charged and I’m due like any other American, the presumption of innocence unless in a court of law that it’s proven otherwise. So I say to them, don’t get ahead of yourselves, just wait and see what happens here because when I went to congress many years ago, there were two African-American members of congress that were under indictment and one was on trial, Harold Ford, Sr., He was tried, had a hung jury, had a retrial and won the case. The other was a very wonderful man named Floyd Flake out of New York who was indicted by Rudy Gulianni but also won his case and the people stood beside him and behind him and they were re-elected year after year and themselves cleared, so they continued their work.

EB: How would you grade yourself a congressman so far as grading my performance as a legislator to date?

WJ: I think it probably came after the storm with the Go-Zone legislation, prior to that, I would probably say some of the things I’ve done have been for economic development with our ports, keeping the maritime industry strong which creates so many jobs for our economy and projects with respect to tourism. But I think our most recent challenges have been the most difficult to face therefore I think I’m most proud of what has happened since the storm. And as far as grading my performance as a legislator to date I would give myself an A minus because there is always room for improvement.

EB: If you could say one thing to the people who are back in the city as well as those who have not yet returned to the city what would you tell them?

WJ: I would tell them to keep supporting us. We’re going to need a sustaining commitment, not just from our delegation and our state but from people all over the country. We are an extraordinarily vital asset to the nation. We refine 30% of the oil our country uses, our ports move 70% of water born cargo, and we are an extraordinary place of culture, original music, and cuisine unlike any other place in the world. This is a place worth saving and being proud of. It’s just an extraordinary place. But there some things we have to end like the correlation of race with poverty and right now, we need to get after it and make sure that when the next storm...
BUILDING A SAFER, STRONGER, SMARTER LOUISIANA

Program Funded by: U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development

Homeowners affected by Hurricane Rita or Katrina may be eligible to receive up to $150,000 in compensation for their losses to get them back into their homes. The Road Home Housing Assistance Centers are open and applications are currently being processed. If you have already registered, you will receive an application packet in the mail. To start your application for Governor Blanco's Road Home program, visit www.road2LA.org or call 1-888-ROAD-2-LA (1-888-762-3252).

District Ninety-Seven Candidates Face Off In Heated Battle

Interviews by Edwin Buggage

The race for State Representative of District 97 has turned into a bitter slugfest where Brian Egana, Legislative Aide to city councilman Oliver Thomas is engaged in a run-off with J.P. Morrell, the son of city councilperson Cynthia Hedge Morrell and Arthur Morrell who served as representative of District 97 for the past two decades. Recently he resigned from his post to serve in his new position as Clerk of Criminal District Court. This race has transcended the issues and the candidates have bitterly exchanged barbs that have gotten personal. This race as have many of our recent elections have become a test of our city will to forge ahead; they are a testament and symbol of what the future of the of the city’s leadership and what type of leaders will captain our city as we rebuild. In a Data News Weekly exclusive we talked to both of the candidates to get their views about their visions for District Ninety-Seven

Brian Egana

By Edwin Buggage

EB: What is it that you feel you would bring to the residents of District 97 that your opponent doesn’t?

BE: Well we’re talking about the legislative branch of government. For the last nine years I’ve had the pleasure to work for New Orleans City Councilman Oliver Thomas as his legislative aide. I have the hands on experience, also for the past nine years I’ve been involved with several communities of this city. I think because of my experience I’m the best qualified.

EB: Your opponent says that since you’ve recently moved into district 97 and he has been part of this community throughout his life and his roots run deeper in the community, he feels he is better qualified to serve as their representative. How do you feel about that?

BE: Well let me tell you a little bit about who is Brian Egana as a young man I grew up in the lower ninth ward. I’m twenty-eight years old, and four years ago I was fortunate enough to purchase my first piece of property and I bought the property in the Gentilly community. I didn’t know the four years I went to college. And I’m not someone who just moved in this community two and one-half years ago. These neighborhoods are so different and unique they all have different needs. It’s not one size fit all for any of the problems of this area and for someone to go through and learn each individual area and what they need that’s going to slow down the process from being effective.

EB: Tell us a little bit about your platform, what is your agenda?

JPM: The three major things I’m working on for District 97 the first issue is crime. Right now we’re dealing with a crime issue, in the past year and a half we’ve had four and integrity have never been questioned and I believe it would be a great opportunity to serve people at a time when they needed it most. In Washington D.C., we need to clean up the culture of corruption and we need people who know how to build bipartisan relationships and coalitions in order to get things done; that's why I offered my services.

Continued page 9.
Karen Carter, Continued from page 3

EB: What are some of the issues you plan to address, what is your platform?

KC: My platform is extensive; while the rest of the country gets to talk about social security and the War in Iraq or immigration we also have to talk about building from the ground up. We have infrastructure needs and a need for federal resources in order to do that. And we also have to talk about education. The Orleans Parish School Board is over a billion dollar problem, Entergy have gotten some monies recently, but clearly are going to need a lot more help in rebuilding. Another issue is affordable housing not only for low income residents but for people in the middle class as well.

We need to rebuild the healthcare community and there is great news today for the healthcare community that has been embraced by all and that's very important. Of course, we need to stand up our school system. We've had tremendous problems next to the City School System where we didn't give the children what they needed to succeed. Now that the Recovery District is in charge of the New Orleans School Board, you have a big new system but we know that the status quo was not good and we had to do something differently. For years and years we watched the system crumble, and now we have to hold the State Recovery District responsible for what its doing but change is never easy. Its very difficult but I know in the end, things will only be better and children will get the tools that they need.

EB: What's Karen Carter's greatest accomplishment to date?

KC: I would probably have to say, taking on tough challenges and being courageous to take on tough challenges that have a significant impact on people's lives like Public Education, Live & Learn Reform, and insurance companies accountable if I had to name a few.

EB: Earlier you talked about credibility and ethics and that is important. Now this is just hypothetical, but do you think that if Congressman William Jefferson wasn't in his present situation would you have still decided to run?

KC: I can't say that, but we have this cloud of suspicion that exist and the circumstances being what they are, we're not dealing with a hypothetical situation. We're dealing with a situation when we know you don't have to commit murder on these people. We are facing tremendous challenges. We are in need of federal resources and things that need to be done requiring us to have respected representation in Washington. The person that serves in that office needs to have the ability to go to their colleagues and have their trust and respect from states across the country. Because that's what would happen if you had the forum of the projects that they have in their area, whether it be a bridge or an after school program, in order to replace the recovery on the top of the agenda, then we're asking them to have confidence that we are going to do right by the federal government and that is to make sure those dollars are being spent effectively and for the purposes that we say. There's a level of trust that's required in relationships and when your own party has stripped you of a position of influence and power; then not because of you or I, but because of the circumstances you can no longer be effective for this community and there is a distraction in your life. The congressman and his family are going through tough times. The congressman has to deal with the fact of being put out innocence or guilt. That's not for me or anyone else to determine and this race is not about an individual it's about what the district needs at a time when it's crippled. What I saw was a void of leadership, effectiveness and an inability to be effectively move forward. When you look at the national news media, recently they have been focusing on the culture of corruption in Congress, and unfortunately we have a black eye associated with that, and I don't think it's fair to the citizens of the 2nd Congressional District to have to endure that.

EB: There have been political ads that have been running on local radio about you that suggest Congressman William Jefferson was innocent and that we need to hold the State Recovery District responsible for some of the people of our community to return. What you feelings about these ads?

KC: It's absurd, a blatant lie and unfortunate that the traditional political tactics are being consistently used again for personal gain. I guess desperate times call for desperate measures, and this is the only way the opponent thinks he can win. I'm not going to get into gutter with him over smear issues. I'm not going to do it. We have circumstances that exist because of me or you, there's only one person under federal investigation and there are two associates of his that have pled guilty and are in route to jail right now as a result of them pleading guilty to bribing him. I didn't do that; Karen Carter did not do that and I think the people of the district deserve better. This race is about recovery and what we need moving forward and we deserve credible and effective leadership and that's why I'm running.

EB: It's a fact that at the national level relationships are very important in Congress and over the years Congressman Jefferson has been able to build relationships. Do you think the state would suffer as a result of sending someone else there?

KC: No I think our district would suffer if we don't send someone there who is credible, and has integrity and without clouds of suspicion. We're at a point in this recovery where we can't afford to have someone moving in and out of Washington, and I submit to you that credibility, honesty and integrity are number one issues with number two being the fact that relationships have to be built. And I agree with you on that front. But the way to build any relationship whether it is with your wife, your children, your friends, or in the workplace, is based on trust. Relationships are always based on trust and when your own party strips you of a position of influence and power notwithstanding the circumstances in your district, knowing what the needs are I don't think there is any major problem. I don't think they wanted to hurt New Orleans at a time when we needed it most absolutely go to Briggs Jefferson is not guilty. How they got there, when a party who believes in the principles I believe in would do this to one of their own members. It's significant and unprecedented and we need to pay attention to this. And the people in Washington are saying about our representative.

EB: There are people all over this country that long to come back to New Orleans. If you could say something to them that could provide them aid and comfort, what would you tell them?

KC: I would tell them to remain steadfast because help is on the way and if they want to be proud again of their public servants, they should have confidence that Karen Carter will offer something different. Not change for the sake of change, but change for the sake of progress and if they give me the opportunity to serve them, I won't let them down and I will deliver.

TC: I think anyone who thinks, says or suggests that race is not a major issue in this community is fooling themselves and they have their heads stuck in the sand. The reality is that race is a real problem and a real issue here. There's a lot of racial divisiveness, there are a lot of racial issues that divide us, but I will tell you that each race I've run, whether it was the city council or the state legislature, I enjoyed tremendous crossover vote form both Black and White, Republican and Democrat. I consider myself someone who is a coalition builder, someone who can bring those factions together to recognize that it's not about being Black or White or Republican or Democrat. We're Americans and if its one thing that Katrina showed us, all the wind and the water that came and flooded and destroyed our homes; it didn't recognize race, wealth or party affiliation and we need to take advantage of that oneness as we rebuild the city.

EB: In an earlier answer you mentioned integrity and credibility, the incumbent is going through a situation right now. Do you think with his present situation that he can effectively represent the citizens of Congressional District 2?

TC: I do not think with the cloud of uncertainty and legal battles Congressman Jefferson has to face that he can give us the level of leadership and effectiveness we desperately need right now; that they can guide our people to do better. Congressman Jefferson has a horrific battle to face; he's got significant allegations of criminal activity that he's going to have to deal with. I don't know if he's capable of putting his personal gain to the side and doing what he says he's going to do, or he's going to having to do it. So I think you have to vote. I have the ability to work with Republicans and Democrats and I'm a proud Democrat. One that makes no apologies for that, but I am not one that will follow down the dark road and vote any way the Democrats ask me to vote. I am going to vote for what's best for the people of the Second Congressional District.

EB: Race was a factor in some of the recent elections in New Orleans; what's your feeling about the state of race and class relations in the city and how do you feel that you can help facilitate healing some of the wounds that have taken place that perhaps are holding up some of the resources to getting into the hand of the citizens of New Orleans?

TC: I think anyone who thinks, says or suggests that race is not a major issue in this community is fooling themselves and they have their heads stuck in the sand. The reality is that race is a real problem and a real issue here. There's a lot of racial divisiveness, there are a lot of racial issues that divide us, but I will tell you that each race I've run, whether it was the city council or the state legislature, I enjoyed tremendous crossover vote form both Black and White, Republican and Democrat. I consider myself someone who is a coalition builder, someone who can bring those factions together to recognize that it's not about being Black or White or Republican or Democrat. We're Americans and if its one thing that Katrina showed us, all the wind and the water that came and flooded and destroyed our homes; it didn't recognize race, wealth or party affiliation and we need to take advantage of that oneness as we rebuild the city.

EB: In an earlier answer you mentioned integrity and credibility, the incumbent is going through a situation right now. Do you think with his present situation that he can effectively represent the citizens of Congressional District 2?

TC: I do not think with the cloud of uncertainty and legal battles Congressman Jefferson has to face that he can give us the level of leadership and effectiveness we desperately need right now; that they can guide our people to do better. Congressman Jefferson has a horrific battle to face; he's got significant allegations of criminal activity that he's going to have to deal with. I don't know if he's capable of putting his personal gain to the side and doing what he says he's going to do, or he's going to having to do it. So I think you have to vote. I have the ability to work with Republicans and Democrats and I'm a proud Democrat. One that makes no apologies for that, but I am not one that will follow

Continued on page xx
These days the African Proverb “it takes a village to raise a child,” is loosely thrown around and rarely acted upon. But for Artist/Educator Giselle Nakhid, it resonates as a sobering fact of life. Young, petite, socially conscious and intensely passionate, Nakhid is reminiscent of an older, much wiser spirit. And in her position as a dance instructor to children from at-risk and severely impoverished neighborhoods, she has concluded that the art of teaching dance is only part of the job.

Raised in a two-parent home and educated at Dillard University, Nakhid admits that the lives of her students bear few similarities to that of hers growing up. In her work at Fisher Elementary where she mainly teaches African and Hip-Hop dance to students in lower grades, she has been bombarded by the societal ills that affect impoverished children all over our city. But through dance, she offers an escape. “With the kids it relaxes me to experience something that I teach, to bring my talent or my gift to teach them. The kids that I teach everyday live in areas where they don’t have that,” she explains. Expectedly, as with most kids, her students grapple with common issues like the dislike of homework, drugs and the like, she knew she had her work cut out for her. “I didn’t grow up like that so I bring to them a sense of reality that they can surpass themselves. Ultimately I want to focus on them and give them positive reinforcement,” says Nakhid adding that the arts offer that reinforcement. She jokes that the kids in her dance class like the traditional African dance that she teaches because it offers something different, but they really enjoy the Hip-Hop class where they get to implement dance from the street. She laughs as she explains that sometimes the kids teach her their moves. “Whatever you put Lean with it Rock with it to, they get it.” And according to Nakhid, they also get the fact that what she and others working for Young Audiences are giving to them is lots of love. She beams as she tells the story of her 7th grader who fights on almost a daily basis. “She’s a rough little girl, but we love her to death. She just needs love.” And when she sees success stories, it makes it all worthwhile. “One student came in with a D or an F in reading. I told him that was unacceptable and we worked with him,” she says. To her delight, weeks later that student ran up to her to show her a B in reading. She consequently gave him what she says was a much needed and deserved reward, something she practices with all of the students who perform well.

Future Steps

While Nakhid is certainly an accomplished dancer who dances with some of the city’s most renowned companies: Kumbuuku Traditional Dance Company, Kulu Traditional African Dance Company, Bamboula 2000, she originally studied community health education at Dillard and holds a Bachelor’s degree in Public Health. In her studies, she focused on STDs in our community and is now outraged that AIDS is still a number one killer of black youth in urban communities. “AIDS should not be coming up, but going down. I want to own my own clinic focusing on women and children and diseases,” she asserts adding that through her studies, she’d like to find a link between dance and health. And when asked what African-Americans can best do to achieve a healthier lifestyle she firmly replies, “read!” She continues, “People assume that I’m an artist so I’m not educated. I’m educated and I want my students to surpass me.” With this goal in mind, Nakhid continues to educate and to mentor. She settles for no less than the best from her students. She remembers a time when dance was a part recreation and part education. Her dance teachers, she says, would drill her over and over again insisting upon perfection. She attributes much of her success to that persistent training. “I’m good at dancing because I’m not educated. I’m educated and I want my students to surpass me.” We applaud her efforts in reaching all those that she can.
J.P. Morrell, Continued from page 5

four years ago I was going to run for office. While he mentions I didn’t live in this community he fails to mention that he was living at home I think only recently he purchased a home on Music Street. But to even go further than that he claims he lived in the community when he was a student at Tulane University but he lived outside the district in an apartment located in downtown New Orleans, so when he says he’s lived in this community his whole life that is not entirely true.

EB: This contest for some people have turned into a race that more about personalities than the issues do you think that it’s problematic that the issues haven’t been discussed and it’s been more a campaign centering around personal attacks?

BE: I’m not engaged in personal attacks if my opponent has to put out negativity that’s for him to do that is not for me. I just go to church and try to participate in that and continue what I’m doing, and that’s being out in the community working. And I’m committed and in this run-off the work is twice as hard and I’m out knocking on doors talking to people one on one speaking to people finding out what the issues are. I’m not that concerned about the attacks because the bottom line is that I’m out there working everyday morning to night.

EB: Since you’ve been talking to the people what are some of the things that the citizens are most concerned about?

BE: I first started canvassing this district three or four months ago and talking to people one of the things they’re most concerned about is housing. Insurance and how it relates to housing is another issue, healthcare, workforce development, and as always education and crime, but the number one issue is housing. The LRA Road Home Program comes up because people need their money so they can get back home and move on with their lives.

EB: What is the one thing or a series of things that separates you from your opponent?

BE: Some people talk about what they have been doing after the storm, but I have nine years of dedication to this city, as I mentioned I grew up in the Lower Ninth Ward and my family moved to the Bywater area, and I purchased a piece of property in the Gentilly area. And also another thing he went to Country Day. I wasn’t fortunate enough to go to Country Day, my parents weren’t elected officials, and my mom and dad were just hard workers, clerks at the grocery store just trying to make ends meet at the end of the day. Sometimes you hear people talking about education and what we need to do with our system, but yet he hasn’t spent much time in the system. I went to public school: Thomas Edison Elementary School, Lawless High School and Douglass High School. How can education be part of his platform, how does he know what to do with our kids when that’s not part of his experience; he doesn’t know what our kids are going through.

EB: I mean no disrespect, but your opponent said that you released a flyer where you admitted Continued page 16.

J.P. Morrell, Continued from page 5

murders, before this past year and a half we haven’t had a murder in nearly a decade. Gentilly was a pretty safe area, but all the drug related crime has come to this area and has really hampered rebuilding because we have a very large elderly population, and people are looking at do they want to move their grandparents or parents back to Gentilly when crime is an issue. Second problem education, we don’t have one public school open in the entire District 97 area. Right now I am working even pre-legislator to try to get Gentilly Terrace open because it suffered minimal damage during Hurricane Katrina and it can serve as a focal point for all the closed elementary schools in the area. The third major issue is the Louisiana Road Home Program and rebuilding: a lot of people despite how much information is available have no idea how it works and a lot of them have been disenchanted about the whole process and so a lot of them haven’t even applied to the program. What I’ve been doing is encourage them to apply and facilitate getting information about the Louisiana Road Home Program and get a catalog of theory complaints and bring it back to the state and work on how we can improve the program and make it more available to people.

EB: What do you feel is you opponent biggest weakness that would impair him from getting the resources people need in District 97?

JPM: The biggest problem he has is that he is an admitted drug dealer. He has admitted that he was a former drug dealer on a mail out he sent to the community. He admitted that when he was in high school he sold drugs to help his mother pay the bills.

Now everybody in New Orleans

Continued page 16.
Re-elect JEFFERSON Congress #12

Still Fighting, Still Winning For Us

Please Vote Nov. 7

Jefferson Campaign Headquarters
4036 Canal Street • New Orleans, LA 70119
1-866-488-2133 toll free • 504-482-2133 phone • 504-482-2134 fax

www.Jefferson4Congress.com
DATA ZONE

Poet’s Corner

Her Answer

Frederick “Hollywood” Delaunay

Sent her away with notions of return

separation meets devastation hard lessons forced to learn

wore her love like armor but still it couldn’t protect me from the water

from the slaughter

from 2000 souls now turned to martyrs

fathers separated from daughters sons and love ones while outcome

remains unclear

her finds freedom and flesh becomes weak

no words to speak no arms to reach

no notions of peace or shadow of light in darkness of night

just silence then stress then shots

search for sanity between helicopter drops

white flags on rooftops and nightmares on street corners

the day the bowl finally filled with water

yet knowing she’s somewhere safe

helps me plot my escape

from the only place I call home

only life I knew as my own

the only love that kept me strong but now is gone

and no poem or song or SBA loan could weather this storm or bring her back home and even though the love remains

so does the pain so does the strain

down came the rain on my city and my soul

soul mate left out in the cold freedom put on hold from national guard & national neglect

and you can’t replace her with some FEMA check

I still dream about the rope of her neck and how the water rose past it how her body went flaccid how I reached out for her hand but couldn’t grab it

a country’s habit to embark on the tragic now seems all too classic

so we reflect on what next in this 40 year pattern

old fashioned ethnic cleansing and we keep letting it happen but she didn’t deserve the weather the worry or the waste

love caught in displaced disgrace a breach of levees and of faith

a life changing mistake

one that I never chose to make

---

Contact: Frederick Hollywood Delaunay at FHD1978@cox.net or Frederick Hollywood Delaunay 70177-0171, 304-4COX.

Turn ordinary TV into TOTAL ENTERTAINMENT!

Cox Cable

More Entertainment

Access up to 240 channels with Cox Digital Cable. Choose from your favorites like HBO, BET, BET Jazz, Lifetime, TVOne and Starz inBlack!

Access to Exciting Advanced Services

Free HD programming. Exciting movies and live events like concerts and sports with On DEMAND/Pay-Per-View.

No Hassles

No equipment to buy.

---

Order Cox Expanded Cable with over 65 channels today for only $15.95/mo for 3 months!

Call today! 304-4COX

---

DATA ZONE

Poet’s Corner

Her Answer

Frederick “Hollywood” Delaunay

Sent her away with notions of return

separation meets devastation hard lessons forced to learn

wore her love like armor but still it couldn’t protect me from the water

from the slaughter

from 2000 souls now turned to martyrs

fathers separated from daughters sons and love ones while outcome

remains unclear

her finds freedom and flesh becomes weak

no words to speak no arms to reach

no notions of peace or shadow of light in darkness of night

just silence then stress then shots

search for sanity between helicopter drops

white flags on rooftops and nightmares on street corners

the day the bowl finally filled with water

yet knowing she’s somewhere safe

helps me plot my escape

from the only place I call home

only life I knew as my own

the only love that kept me strong but now is gone

and no poem or song or SBA loan could weather this storm or bring her back home and even though the love remains

so does the pain so does the strain

down came the rain on my city and my soul

soul mate left out in the cold freedom put on hold from national guard & national neglect

and you can’t replace her with some FEMA check

I still dream about the rope of her neck and how the water rose past it how her body went flaccid how I reached out for her hand but couldn’t grab it

a country’s habit to embark on the tragic now seems all too classic

so we reflect on what next in this 40 year pattern

old fashioned ethnic cleansing and we keep letting it happen but she didn’t deserve the weather the worry or the waste

love caught in displaced disgrace a breach of levees and of faith

a life changing mistake

one that I never chose to make

---

Contact: Frederick Hollywood Delaunay at FHD1978@cox.net or Frederick Hollywood Delaunay 70177-0171, 304-4COX.

Turn ordinary TV into TOTAL ENTERTAINMENT!

Cox Cable

More Entertainment

Access up to 240 channels with Cox Digital Cable. Choose from your favorites like HBO, BET, BET Jazz, Lifetime, TVOne and Starz inBlack!

Access to Exciting Advanced Services

Free HD programming. Exciting movies and live events like concerts and sports with On DEMAND/Pay-Per-View.

No Hassles

No equipment to buy.

---

Order Cox Expanded Cable with over 65 channels today for only $15.95/mo for 3 months!

Call today! 304-4COX

---
NEW ORLEANS AGENDA – Governor Kathleen Blanco, Lt. Governor Mitch Landrieu, and Mayor C. Ray Nagin joined with Michelle Ebanks, President Essence Communications and Susan L. Taylor, Editorial Director, Essence, and Angela Burt Murray, Editor-in-Chief, Essence Essence Host Committee in announcing that the Essence Music Festival will return to New Orleans for three years.

The State Office of Tourism under the leadership of Lt. Governor Mitch Landrieu has worked out a deal in which additional marketing dollars will be provided from the state to help publicize the annual event which had been held in New Orleans until Hurricane Katrina forced the festival to Houston last year. Landrieu, who led the negotiations, said Louisiana has worked since a few weeks after Hurricane Katrina to make sure the state didn’t lose the festival, which was started in New Orleans in 1995 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Essence magazine.

Michelle Ebanks, says New Orleans is the, quote, “obvious choice.” She says it’s important for “the festival to participate in the rebirth of this city.”

The festival known as “the party with a purpose” will serves as a plus for New Orleans as it rebuilds its community and tourism base. It features hip-hop, rhythm and blues and soul performances at the Louisiana Superdome by night and inspirational “empowerment seminars” by day.

Next year’s Essence Music Festival will be held July 5, 6 and 7 with events at both the Louisiana Superdome and the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center.
10% off fence panels and 80 lb. concrete
Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. Other applies to all in-stock wood and vinyl fence panels and concrete items #10385. Price reduction taken at register. See store for details.

15% off select generators
Offer applies to item #45428, 65157, 172680, 227870 only. Selection may vary by store. Offer not valid on prior purchases, clearance merchandise, or online purchases. No rain checks. We reserve the right to limit quantities to the amount reasonable for homeowners and our regular contractor customers. Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. Price reduction taken at register. See store for details.

30% off select full-size gas grills
While supplies last. Prices as marked. Availability may vary by store. See store for details.

20% off all in-stock ceiling fans
Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. Price reduction taken at register. See store for details.

20% off weatherstripping
Price reduction taken at register. Offer valid 10/26/06 - 10/30/06. See store for details.

25% off all in-stock R-13 fiberglass insulation.
Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. Price reduction taken at register. See store for details.

PLUS $100 Gift Card offer in effect until 11/26/06
Via mail-in rebate with purchase of $299 or more in-stock fiberglass insulation. Limit 2 per customer. See store for details.

For the Lowe’s nearest you, call 1-800-993-4416 or visit us online at Lowes.com
Prices may vary after October 30, 2006 if there are market variations. “Was” prices in this advertisement were in effect on October 19, 2006, and may vary based on Lowe’s Every Day Low Price policy. See store for details regarding product warranties. We reserve the right to limit quantities. ©2006 by Lowe’s. All rights reserved. Lowe’s and the gable design are registered trademarks of LF, LLC. 061092

SPECIAL VALUES
5 days only
10/26/06 – 10/30/06

SPECIAL VALUES!

now $98
YOUR CHOICE
32” or 36” 9-Lite Steel Entry Door Unit
• Ready for lockset and deadbolt • Primed and ready to paint • Ready-to-install door with frame • Adjustable sill with full composite substrate for a tight fit

now $564
7/16” x 4’ x 8’ OSB
• Use for roof and wall construction • Recommended for covered use #12212

now $29
was $39
5-2 Day Programmable Thermostat
• Slim, compact design • Large, easy-to-read display #39901

SPECIAL VALUE!

10% off in-stock treated decking
Offer applies to item #217101, 21900, 21713, 21717, 21716, 21886, 21881, 21704 only. Price reduction taken at register. Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. See store for details.

SPECIAL VALUE!

25% off in-stock vinyl siding panels
Price reduction taken at register. Offer valid 10/26/06 through 10/30/06. See store for details.

YOUR CHOICE

SPECIAL VALUE!

now $78
32” or 36” White Fremont Storm Door
• Self-storing window and screen are fully adjustable for ventilation #110387, #88

SPECIAL VALUE!

now $95
10/14
4-pack
10.1 Oz. Silicone I Window and Door 100% Silicone Rubber Sealant #35166 bonus 4-pack free tube included

Activists Gear Up for Expected Problems at the Polls on Election Day

By. Hazel Trice Edney NNPA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NNPA) – Six years after the 2000 election fiasco that disenfranchised more than a million African-Americans, voting advocates and election officials are taking steps to avert any serious problems during Tuesday’s high stakes election.

“We truly have concerns, which is why we’ve been pushing for preparation. It’s because we do believe there’s going to be a lot of chaos at the polls,” says Melanie Campbell, president and chief executive officer of the National Coalition on Black Civic Participation. “Folks who want to disenfranchise are going to be working Civic Participation.”

African-Americans, voting advocates and election officials are working to avert any serious problems during Tuesday’s high stakes election.

“The key is giving people what they need in order to do everything they can so that if they’ve got problems, they’ll know it before Election Day.”

By. Melde Rutledge Special to the NNPA from the Carolina Peacemaker

GREENSBORO, N.C. (NNPA) – After months of buildup, media icon Oprah Winfrey accomplished what many people believed she would do on Oct. 20–help raise thousands of dollars for Bennett College for Women.

Winfrey, best recognized for her Emmy Award-winning television show, as well as being a leading book critic, an Academy Award-nominated actress and magazine publisher, was the focal point of the benefit gala that evening at the Grandover Resort.

The event was designed to raise funds for the academic institution’s Revitalizing Bennett Campaign that plans to raise $30 million by 2007.

“This is a joy,” said Bennett President Johnetta Cole.

Friday’s event, according to Bennett’s executive assistant to the vice president for institutional advancement, Wanda Mobley, raised approximately $800,000 from ticket sales and sponsorships.

“These girls come from the very bottom, to be here tonight, paying to be here tonight, paying a significant amount to be here tonight, means that you care about giving back some of what you’ve been given,” she said.

“It is a responsibility. It is our calling.”

Winfrey’s comments centered on encouraging people who have succeeded in life to give back to those in need.

“You cannot continue to move forward in your life unless you’re willing to give back what you have been given,” she said.

“When you allow yourself to be one of the architects, ‘These girls come from the bottom of the barrel,’ you’re saying to young women,” she said.

Winfrey accomplished what many people thought she could not do all of this because I am these girls.”

Oprah Winfrey arrives at the J.P. Morgan Library and Museum in New York in this May 11, 2006, file photo. Winfrey headlined a fundraiser at Bennett College, a private college for black women in Greensboro, N.C., on Friday, Oct. 20, 2006. AP Photo/Stephen Chernin/FILE

Oprah Helps Raise Thousands for Bennett College

Continued on page 14

Sadie’s Legendary Salon

2301 Jackson Avenue  |  Hours:  Wed - Fri: 9am - 5pm  |  Sat: 6am - 12noon
Call (504) 522-2563 or (504) 522-8387 for appointments

NOW OPEN!
Sadie’s
BEAUTY SALON
Shampoo & Style
10% Off
20% Off any Chemical Service

Our qualified professionals offer a wide range of styles & services.

Since 1963

---

"Your presence here tonight ensures that we will indeed be able to hold Bennett’s doors open for many, many, many years to come," Dr. Arthur Affleck, Bennett’s vice president for institutional advancement, told the audience of approximately 800 people, who paid $250, $500 and $1,000 per seat.

"It is a joy," said Bennett President Johnetta Cole.

Friday’s event, according to Bennett’s executive assistant to the vice president for institutional advancement, Wanda Mobley, raised approximately $800,000 from ticket sales and sponsorships.

“Your presence here tonight ensures that we will indeed be able to hold Bennett’s doors open for many, many, many years to come,” Dr. Arthur Affleck, Bennett’s vice president for institutional advancement, told the audience of approximately 800 people, who paid $250, $500 and $1,000 per seat.

“Your presence here tonight ensures that we will indeed be able to hold Bennett’s doors open for many, many, many years to come,” Dr. Arthur Affleck, Bennett’s vice president for institutional advancement, told the audience of approximately 800 people, who paid $250, $500 and $1,000 per seat.

Winfrey explained how she learned the power of words in her life to give back to those in need.

"So you being here tonight, paying to be here tonight, paying a significant amount to be here tonight, means that you care about giving back some of what you’ve been given," she said.

"It is a responsibility. It is our calling."
continued from page 12

Campbell says prospective voters should be clear in advance that they are indeed registered to vote and where they must vote.

Unity 06, a campaign that has been led by a coalition of major Black organizations convened by the NCBCP for every national election since 2000 provides a national hotline that is available this week and on Election Day to give this information to any voter who calls.

The federal Help America Vote Act has required each state to establish a Voter Registration Database, which Unity 06 has made easily accessible by toll-free number, 1-886-My-Vote1 (1-886-698-6831) or at www.myvotelineplace.com. The number can also be used for a person to make a complaint about anything that has occurred at a voting poll or if a voter needs legal council.

In some states where races are especially contentious, lawyers, poll monitors and additional volunteers will be at precincts to assist voters in an “Election Protection” program led by the People For the American Way Foundation, the NAACP, and the Lawyers' Committee For Civil Rights Under Law. All are accessible through 1-886-My-Vote1.

Unity has released a list of “Seven Things You Need to Know Before Election Day to Protect Your Vote.” In addition to whether a person is registered to vote and where to vote, the other five are whether you will be in town on Election Day; whether there are identification requirements for voting in your state; advance knowledge of individual Election Day rights; where to file a complaint if necessary and know that if you arrive at the polls before they close, you still have the right to vote - even with a long line.

Answers to some of the seven items can be researched state by state on www.CanVote.org, a website compiled by the National Association of Secretaries of State.

Gracia M. Hillman, chair of the bipartisan U.S. Election Assistance Commission, established by Congress four years ago to oversee the distribution of $3 billion to states for election improvements and the creation of new standards for voting machines, says voters will need all the help they can get.

“Voters may feel overwhelmed. It’s one thing that you’ll have positions are. And if there’s areferenda on the ballot, then you’ve got to be knowledgeable about the referenda. And on top of all of that, there are new voting procedures,” says Hillman. “It’s a lot.”

And a lot is at stake.

Currently, Republicans dominate both the House and the Senate. Democrats are striving to win at least 15 seats in the House and at least six in the Senate in order to gain control of Congress. For Blacks, a Democratic majority in the House could mean important committee chairmanships for four members of the Congressional Black Caucus, veteran Congressmen John Conyers (D-Mich.) could become the Chairman of House Judiciary Committee, Charles Rangel (D-N.Y), of the House Ways and Means Committee, Bennie Thompson (D-Miss.) of the Homeland Security Committee; and Juanita Millender-McDonald (D-Calif.) of the Administration Committee.

All states maintain the right to choose their own voting systems and election procedures, but new voting machines in most states are variations of two systems, says Hillman. One is the optical scan system, in which a voter marks a paper ballot and places it into a scanner that tabulates it. The other is the electronic touch screen, a computerized system requiring only the touch of a voter making selections. Officials are hoping for smooth processes, but there is evidence of pending trouble.

A report by Electionline.org, a non-partisan, non-advocacy Web site that provides news and analysis on election reform, says that 10 states are at particular risk for problems:

- Arizona, where a 2004 court ruling requires proof of citizenship at the polls;
- Colorado, where new consolidated voting centers called “voting centers” have replaced neighborhood precincts;
- Connecticut, where antiquated lever voting machines still exist - out of compliance with a federal requirement for updated voting technology by Jan. 1, 2006;
- Florida, which recently experienced problems auditing totals from new optical scanners and has also changed its voter identification requirement from allowing voters without state or federal identification to sign an affidavit to allowing voters without government-issued I.D.’s to only submit a provisional ballot;
- Indiana, which has the most stringent voter identification law in the nation, requiring all voters to present state or federally-issued photo identification at the polls with no other options;
- Kentucky, where short-staffing and inadequate training is blamed for the mistaken omission of voter access cards from voter packages that resulted in chaos at several precincts during recent primaries;
- New York, which failed to meet the federal deadline for creating a statewide voter registration database and for establishing accessible voting machines for the disabled;
- Ohio, which faces an election in which Secretary of State J. Kenneth Blackwell recently issued an advisory that said voter identification cards must have their current addresses, a requirement that was contrary to state law. He sought to clarify, but some confusion is still perceived.

Pennsylvania, where activists have filed yet unresolved lawsuits complaining that the paperless voting procedures in some counties caused confusion at the polls in 2004 as people were unable to see clearly how they voted;

Washington state, where King County, the most populous jurisdiction in the state, has moved to paperless electronic machines for the first time while the remainder of the state operates a vote-by-mail system following a tumultuous gubernatorial race in 2004.

“This doesn’t necessarily mean there’s going to be problems and it doesn’t necessarily mean there are states not on the list where there might be a problem,” says Sean Greene, research director for the report, “Election Review 2000, What’s Changed, What Hasn’t and Why.”

Greene adds, “Almost all of these states on our 10 states to watch have close races as well. And that is usually the recipe for some sort of post-election problem.”

In most instances, when there is a dispute, provisional ballots can be cast and verified later by voter registrars. But Campbell warns that provisional ballots should not be accepted by voters who are simply confused and need help.

“Know you have a right to request and receive help from poll-workers,” Campbell says. “What tended to happen in 2004, when there were a lot of long lines and poll workers were overwhelmed, they tended to give people provisional ballots. But, in most places, if you’re in the polling places, you can vote provisionally all you want, your vote doesn’t count. So, if you’re in the wrong polling place, they need to let you know long enough to find out where you need to be so you can go to the right precinct.”

Hillman says it normally takes three to 10 days to determine – from a provisional ballot – whether a voter had a right to vote at a particular precinct.

Though even the government expects an imperfect Election Day, Hillman says she is hoping for, and yet right and fair polls.

“Voters need to appreciate the fact that the people who run elections across this country are professional people. This is their Focus N.O.R.D. As A Long Term Solution

The Love Dr.
Data Columnist

Over the years I’ve come to understand what Malcolm really foretold when he declared that the “chickens come home to roost.” He foretold what we now in retrospect have to acknowledge: that every male child that we have allowed to grow up without feeling loved and cared for is now our worse nightmare. Most of us should be beginning to understand that unloved boys become dangerous and irresponsible men, men who have no sense of propriety because they never benefited from any sense of propriety in the adults in their lives.

Any survey of the prison population will identify two facts. One, that hardly any men in prison had caring men in their lives, and that hardly any men in prison are really literate (not reading well enough to enjoy it or obtain useful information). Yet it seems that we continue to believe that crime can be solved without creatively engaging boys in such a way that they are cared for by responsible adults and encouraged, bribed or led to reading as a way to make themselves more self-sufficient and independent.

These two basic skills, the ability to love and be loved with the ability to learn are the essential ingredients that allow with the ability to learn are the essential ingredients that allow the ability to love and be loved with the ability to learn are the essential ingredients that allow the ability to love and be loved with the ability to learn are the essential ingredients that allow the ability to love and be loved with the ability to learn are the essential ingredients that allow...
NEWSMAKER

Vote November 7th!

Integrity
Experience
Proven Leadership

Troy Carter has a plan to rebuild our community
Troy Carter has delivered in our neighborhoods
Troy Carter has delivered on jobs
Troy Carter has delivered on affordable housing

---

J.P. Morrell, Continued from page 9

especially those with any political savvy whatsoever knows this fact that Baton Rouge is a very adversarial process it’s frequently the metro New Orleans area versus the rest of the state. If you send a legislator to Baton Rouge who is an admitted criminal, with that type of baggage we can’t afford to send him Baton Rouge, I don’t think he would be an effective legislator. I believe he would be ineffective and legislators around the state would treat this guy like kryptonite.

EB: There are critics that have said your family is trying to build a political dynasty and we need new blood versus having the same political families holding elected offices. How do you respond to that?

JP: I will respond to this in two ways my opponent is not new blood Councilman Oliver Thomas is his protégé and relative he is a member of the BOLD Political Organization we both have political ties that run very deep. What I tell people is look at our credentials, look at our experience and our visions for this area, look at our relationship. I want you to remember who is Brian Egana. In the public and I want the people to know who is Brian Egana. I think there is a big disconnect with the people at City Hall, and I’ve been there nine years to know the system in and out. I have built relationships and I can be that legislator to bring everyone at the table together, that hasn’t happened thus far and that’s disheartening to me. I know I’m going to be a rookie up there if elected but I’m committed to working hard and if I go down on votes fighting for my community that’s what I’m committed to doing. And I propose that we should have quarterly meetings with the elected officials within district 97 which if elected would be myself the city council person, and the state senator. I’m tired of...
Gretna Sheriff Harry Lee Stirs the Kettle Again

Suburban Gretna Sheriff Henry Lee draws ire again from Black leaders, this time in suggesting his deputies would stop, search and run background checks on young black males congregating in high-crime areas. And although Lee ordered the plan later abandoned, he did not apologize for his statements or his sentiment.

In a joint news conference with Dematas King, president of the local NAACP branch, Lee commented “I would prefer to prevent murder rather than solve a murder. But apparently not everyone feels that way.”

King responded to Lee, “There are no other people in this community more worried about solving crime and preventing murder than the black community. But not by stopping black people and harassing them for doing nothing,” King said.

Lee has on several occasions commented that the rise in the crime rate in his west bank community post Katrina can be attributed to displaced residents of New Orleans bringing crime into his community.

Despite their inability to reach an agreement on the subject, Lee pledged to work with the NAACP to reduce crime and fund youth programs with tax dollars.

Gretna Sheriff, Harry Lee is again surrounded in racial controversy

30,000 Ballots Cast in Early Voting

Large numbers could be the spoilers in close ground battles - Baton Rouge – Almost 30,000 Louisiana voters have already cast early ballots for the upcoming November 7 general election in which representatives for US Congress and 8 amendments to the state constitution are slated for decision. Early voting which concludes on October 31, 2006, allows a voter to cast a ballot without a stated reason at the local registrars of voters' office. Elections Commissioner Angie LaPlace said that registrars expected a heavy turnout on the last day. A total of 8,808 voters casting early ballots for the September 0 primary elections was recorded. LaPlace also said that when absentee ballots from displaced voters, military and others were added in, the pre-election voting total rose to 42,433, which is also possible for this general election.

Immigrants helping rebuild New Orleans say they’re making less

By JENALIA MORENO

Above the din of hammers, drills and mortar mixers, some immigrant construction workers are grumbling that wages have dropped and a lull in work has developed in the last few months. “It was better in the beginning,” said Honduran Marcos Antonio Enamorado, who lived in Houston for six years before moving to New Orleans last year.

The prospect of a plethora of high-paying jobs is drawing workers like Enamorado to the area. But some immigrants, especially those on the ground looking for work, say there aren’t as many projects under way and wages are falling.

Enamorado may be right about it being better in the beginning. According to an April estimate by the Washington-based Advancement Project, 30,000 to 100,000 migrant workers moved to Gulf Coast areas after Hurricane Katrina.

And according to a June study by Tulane University and University of New Orleans bringing crime into his community.

New Orleans is your home. As the city rebuilds it's important to stay involved every step of the way—for instance, by attending the Community Support Organization (CSO) meetings at the New Orleans City Council Chamber.

The CSO is the committee responsible for overseeing the progress of the Unified New Orleans Plan (UNOP), the city’s unified rebuilding effort. Comprised of representatives from the Mayor’s office, City Council, the City Planning Commission, the Greater New Orleans Foundation and a resident from each of the city’s five voting districts, the CSO is in place to keep you informed as the planning process continues.

CSO MEETING    THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 2006 FROM 5:30 PM TO 7:30 PM
NEW ORLEANS CITY COUNCIL CHAMBER

AGENDA FOR 11/9 MEETING:

I. WELCOME AND INTRODUCTIONS – 5 MIN.
II. REPORT ON ACTIONS RESULTING FROM OCTOBER 26 CSO MEETING – 15 MIN.
III. PRESENTATIONS BY PLANNING TEAMS – 20 MIN.
IV. CITYWIDE TEAM FINANCIAL OVERVIEW PRESENTATION – 20 MIN.
V. REPORT ON FIRST CITY-WIDE COMMUNITY CONGRESS – 5 MIN.
VI. PUBLIC COMMENT

For more information about UNOP, please visit www.unifiedneworleansplan.org or call Louisiana Rebuilds toll-free at 877-527-3384.

The Unified New Orleans Plan is funded by grants from the Rockefeller Foundation, the Greater New Orleans Foundation and the Bush-Clinton Katrina Fund.
Derrick Shepherd, Continued from page 3

DS: I'm a man of the people, I stay in the streets and I work and talk to the people; I engage them. I don't just rely on television and radio to get my message to the people.

EB: How much if at all did the recent troubles of Congressman William Jefferson play a part in you deciding to run?

DS: In part I decided to run because of his trouble and also what I feel is the lack of service he's providing for the community.

EB: If you were elected what would be some of the issues you would immediately address?

DS: I would implement my one-hundred day plan; I would open up offices one on the Westbank and one in New Orleans and then I would send out a newsletter inviting all military veterans within the district to come to a veterans summit and ask those veterans to provide mentoring for our young people particularly African-American males and White males as well. I would also file legislation to change the Stafford Act to give the Mayor of New Orleans, Gretna, Westwego and Kenner complete authority during a national declared disaster to rebuild their city in a way they see fit.

EB: In your opinion what are the biggest problems facing District 2 are facing presently?

DS: It's different depending on what area you're talking about, on the Westbank we have infrastructure and crime problems, and on the Eastbank we have education, crime, levees, and housing issues.

EB: What is it that you have specifically done as a State Representative that has had an effect on the people of your district?

DS: I passed the legislation for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday. I've also passed legislation to give every baby born in the state free immunization, and I brought home five million dollars worth of projects to the district. As a state senator I passed a voting rights bill that allowed all New Orleanians to vote in the mayoral election and other local elections who were displaced, and I passed legislation in honor of the Marrero fire victims to make sure that every mattress sold in the state is fire resistant.

EB: What skills and attributes have you acquired in your military career that has shaped the way you live you life and how you govern as a legislator?

DS: The military has taught me the leadership values that I bring to the table everyday. It's taught me how to get up early and go to be late, to complete a task no matter what the obstacles are and to have the courage to step to the plate and lead when nobody else would.

EB: There are people who are back in the city and those who are still displaced if Derrick Shepherd could tell them one thing what would he tell them?

DS: Stay positive, enjoy where you are and learn from those different experiences so that when you bring a taste of that home New Orleans to you can make it a better place.

Regina Bartholemew, Continued from page 3

RB: No, of course not, because it would have been a disservice to the citizens of the Second Congressional District. We need someone on the Ways and Means Committee in order to do critical things for us and it would have been quite selfish I think for any of us to be in this race if he still had his post on the Ways and Means Committee and if he still had credibility in Washington D.C.; so, no I wouldn't have run. But because he has been stripped of his position, and also he lacks credibility at this point, I think its time for a change not just change from one politician to another; it is time for a total change so that the people who have been suffering for the last sixteen years under various political leadership can finally get the relief and the representation that they need.

EB: Again let me ask you about that because it was a two part question what are you feelings about integrity and its importance in this race?
RB: When I think of integrity I use the word you. I see it in many different aspects of life but in the political world integrity in my mind means that you are not using your political office or your political position to benefit anybody other than the people you represent in your elected district. Let me give you a pointed example of what I'm talking about; not boasting in one breath about being a candidate and then after it burned to the ground and then in the next breath, the second highest ranking person in the BOLD Organization is executive director; how does that benefit the community as a whole? I have no idea how much money he makes but he is a high ranking official in your political organization. I'm also talking about Doug Evans and the lawyer, not to mention the thing I'm talking about is not getting on television like State Representative Derrick Shepherd and boasting about how you're doing all these wonderful things for these burn victims due to those mattresses catching fire when they suffered a great loss then charging them attorneys fees for his services; that's not integrity. I believe if you want to boast about using your office to do things, then do community service, public service things and don’t look for the media to come and give you praise and honor when you know you have charged attorneys fees to those same suffering people. I don’t think that they should use their office to do things that are questionable, in my mind, in terms of integrity and they should not. We need to invest in the finger at other people and say they don’t have integrity. I don’t believe any officeholder should use their office for personal gain. You are a public servant and what that means to me is that you are there to serve the public and no other interest groups, not BOLD, Progressive Democrats, SOUL, COUP or LIFE organizations, not your family members or to line your own personal pockets. While some are pointing the finger at one particular candidate; when I talk about integrity I’m talking about our political leadership; to not use their office to benefit themselves, but to use their office to benefit the greater good of everybody.

EB: If you were elected what are your top priorities?

RB: Like I said before I would push for rent control. My father is one of thirteen children and at the time the hurricane hit he had ten siblings that resided in the New Orleans area and none of them were home owners except one and one of his sisters was a renter. I have seen that area and their homes were okay after being transported out of the city. But the rest of them are all displaced so it’s a personal issue to me. They all want to come home but they can’t because they can’t afford the rent they would be back here. I would push for rent control for 24 months; after that, we move them into mixed income community developments and I want to see my aunts and uncles become homeowners.

EB: Some New Orleans Area are back while many are still trying to find their way home. If you could tell them one thing what would you tell them?

RB: I would tell them that if they want to come home, this city still wants them to come home, southeast Louisiana still cares about them, and is not looking to green space any part of this city and the people want them back. I want them back, they are what made up our city. Every person that is displaced is part of the culture of New Orleans and Jefferson Parish they are wanted and if I'm elected, I will do everything in my power to make sure that the welcome mat is still out for them and it's out beyond just words. It will be out in terms of opportunities for them to come home and affordable.

Troy Carter, Continued from page 6.

EB: What is going to be the main thing you have to do with the housing situation, so education has to be at the forefront. Then you have developments and I want to see my aunts and uncles become homeowners.

EB: Some New Orleans Area are back while many are still trying to find their way home. If you could tell them one thing what would you tell them?

RB: I would tell them that if they want to come home, this city still wants them to come home, southeast Louisiana still cares about them, and is not looking to green space any part of this city and the people want them back. I want them back, they are what made up our city. Every person that is displaced is part of the culture of New Orleans and Jefferson Parish they are wanted and if I'm elected, I will do everything in my power to make sure that the welcome mat is still out for them and it's out beyond just words. It will be out in terms of opportunities for them to come home and affordable.

EB: Finally, if you could tell the Katrina evacuees and those who are back in the city as well as those who are scattered about the country?

TC: Help is on the way, there is a plan and that Troy Carter that you know and have supported and voted for in the past is fully engaged and is in this race to find the resources and help to give them the opportunity to come home. And to not to a empty promise of home, but home where there are places to live, home where there are schools to educate your children, home where there are hospitals to take care of the sick, home where there are places where you can have meaningful jobs better than minimum wage. Help is on the way.

EB: Let's say hypothetically you were elected, what would be your top priorities?

TC: Initially, I would go to Washington and compel the members of congress to expedite the process for those who desire to return?

RB: Like I said before I would push for rent control. My father is one of thirteen children and at the time the hurricane hit he had ten siblings that resided in the New Orleans area and none of them were home owners except one and one of his sisters was a renter. I have seen that area and their homes were okay after being transported out of the city. But the rest of them are all displaced so it’s a personal issue to me. They all want to come home but they can’t because they can’t afford the rent they would be back here. I would push for rent control for 24 months; after that, we move them into mixed income community

EB: If you were elected what are your top priorities?

TC: Initially, I would go to Washington and compel the members of congress to expedite the process for those who desire to return.

EB: Do you have any final thoughts or something you would like to say to the people of the second Congressional District that we haven't discussed?

TC: Help is on the way, there is a plan and that Troy Carter that you know and have supported and voted for in the past is fully engaged and is in this race to find the resources and help to give them the opportunity to come home. And to not to a empty promise of home, but home where there are places to live, home where there are schools to educate your children, home where there are hospitals to take care of the sick, home where there are places where you can have meaningful jobs better than minimum wage. Help is on the way.
Listen to win $1 Million
With the Cash Call

www.wyldfm.com